Gold Persons are realistic, matter-of-fact, and more curious about new products than they are about new ideas and theories. They are very good at following procedures and in detailing rules and regulation. They prefer work environments in which duties and authorities are well defined and where they can be rewarded through hard work, loyalty, and following rules. They are usually neat and orderly at work; companies value them as responsible and dependable employees. Their interest in thoroughness, practically, punctuality, and efficiency leads them to occupations in which these preferences are appreciated.
