Greens are the most reluctant of all color types to do things in a traditional manner. They are always on the lookout for new projects, new activities, and new procedures. This accounts for their tendency to become entrepreneurs and to work for themselves. Greens can succeed in a variety of occupations as long as the job does not involve too many “hum-drum” routines. They need to lose interest once their work is no longer challenging and they may fail to follow-through, often to the discomfort of colleagues. As an employee, the green person might work against the system just for the joy of being one-up. However, this type can contribute immensely in a work atmosphere that allows independence and expression of ingenuity.
